

The proposed application is an online database that stores information about food products from supermarkets. Users of the application can view and search the database for the items/deals they are looking for. The user can then add products to a cart list they can use later. one user can have many products, one cart can have many products in it and one admin can control many user accounts.

